

OUR ISLAND CONTEMPORARIES

Maui Did It, Can't Hawaii?

If the plans of those people interested in the advertising of the island of Hawaii go through as expected, the island will get a boost that will be heard of all around the United States and elsewhere. The proposition is to establish two rest houses on the slope and summit of the mountain of Mauna Loa. The scheme is a good one, and it is only a matter of securing the funds for the project. The county board of supervisors has been appealed to and it is up to the solons to decide whether or not they can assist financially in the matter.

The residents of Maui, aided by many of the citizens of this island, raised money to establish a proper rest house on the summit of Haleakala. That project went through in good shape, and the next step is the construction of a road to the summit of the big mountain. Surely the people of this island, with a population so much larger than Maui and with scenic attractions that the Valley Island cannot compete with, can afford, either by public subscription or through county funds to donate something to make the Mauna Loa rest house a possibility.

With another outbreak of Mokuweewe scheduled for some time in the near future, some provision should be made for the housing overnight of the hundreds of people who will, without a doubt, scale the mountain side so as to get close to the lava flow. And, even if the outbreak be delayed for a long period, there are many people who wish very much to climb the mountain and gaze into the huge crater, but who cannot possibly stand the rigors of a camp out in the open on the rocks with no shelter whatsoever available. The two rest houses, constructed at a very small cost, would make the Mauna Loa trip fairly easy of accomplishment. The trail that would be built at the same time would enable visitors to ride in comfort to the rest houses. Maui did it, why can't Hawaii?—Hawaii Herald.

A locally owned steamship company operating between San Francisco and Honolulu, floating shares at $5 per share, ought to be and certainly would pay. We will take five dollars' worth ourselves. Further, we will use our moral suasion to get the office boy and the religious editor to subscribe, too.

Since writing the above we have received assurances from the society editors that he will also purchase five simoleons' worth of All Hawaiian Steamship stock.—The Service.

The Federal inspectors disagreed with the Utilities Commission as to the Inter-Island's responsibility for the drowning at Lahaina, and the boat in which they were was upset in three feet of water, to prove it.

If Hiku was so valuable a boat steerer as the affidavits produced by Superintendent Sheedy would indicate why did the Inter-Island give him the bounce after the investigation?—Kohala Midget.

The Big Sugar Interests of Maui do not want McGregor's landing, and the Inter-Island does. The Big Sugar Interest of Maui will get it in the thorax, just as the Hilo Railway did.—Kohala Midget.

To the layman it would appear that there are far too many small license fees demanded from a man in a small way of business. The proprietor of a small store seems to have his wall covered with documents which give him permission to sell or do such and such things. Some day some one with brains will wipe out this state of affairs, and see that one tax pays for the privilege of carrying on half a dozen small departments in a single store.—Hawaii Herald.

Says the Kohala Midget: "The booze problem in Kohala, as it relates to a saloon, is 'not' a live issue today, we are thankful to say; it is a very dead dog." We cannot speak for the dog, but a few blind shots still enter into the problem.—Garden Island.

Kauai's Government and Publicity.

A considerable proportion of the satisfaction felt by the people of Kauai in the work of their county supervisors is traceable directly to the policy of the letter in taking the former into their confidence by means of publicity. Detailed reports of all meetings are prepared by the county clerk and then are, upon instructions of the supervisors, published in full in the local newspaper, so that every person on Kauai is enabled to see and understand exactly what our county government is doing from day to day and month to month. There is nothing concealed, and everybody knows it. The result? General satisfaction, most naturally. Again (and even more important, perhaps) the financial statements of the county are published every quarter in the same way, so that every citizen and taxpayer may see and understand at regular intervals just how his money is being used and what the financial standing of the county is. It is a beautiful system. It forestalls suspicion; it nullifies any occasion for criticism. It is worth thousands to the county government and the people. Were the same system followed on Oahu, Maui and Hawaii we would hear far less of criticism and dissatisfaction with county government, and nothing of scandal and thievery.—Garden Island.
